NATURAL HISTORY.—One feature of a circus that is given least consideration, and which is entitled to more than passing notice, is the educational value thereof, aside from its amusement features. A child is sent to school and the average youth or youngster finds as most interesting the study of natural history. It dotes on the ferocious lion; it marvels at the monstrosities of the elephant, and worries over the pronunciation of "hippopotamus" and "rhinoceros." A teacher will vouch for the statement that one object lesson is of more value than a hundred book lessons. The menagerie of a big circus affords the only possible opportunity for a child to study in life the animals whose pictures they are wont to see in their school-books. Consequently the great educational value of these traveling amusement institutions. On Friday, Oct. 13th, the famous Adam Forepaugh and Sells Bros. combined circuses, menageries and hippodromes are announced to exhibit in Paris. It is claimed for this aggregation and justly so, that its wild beast exhibit surpasses in variety and extent that of any other known collection of a similar character. It embraces the menageries of the original Adam Forepaugh show and that of the equally as well known Sells Brothers. The zoological departments of both of these amusement entertainments has and always will be made a feature. The greatest possible endeavor and a fabulous amount of money has been expended in bringing together this collection of animals of every clime and condition, which, it is promised, contains the rarest specimens of the animal kingdom. To make the menagerie department one of special interest the management makes the announcement that men who have made natural history a study will be in attendance at all times, their sole duty being for the especial benefit of the children. What better opportunity can be conceived for giving the younger generation an object lesson in zoology.

DEWEY AT HOME

He Arrives at Shelburne Farms, Vt., the Guest of Dr. Webb.

The Admiral Seemed Happy as He Again Looked Upon the Mountains of Vermont—He Will Be the Guest of the State Thursday.

SHELBURNE, Vt., Oct. 11.—Adm. Dewey is home at last and is happy to be within the shadow of the green mountains and beside the waters of Lake Champlain, away from the noise and bustle that have filled his ears since his flagship Olympia came in sight of Sandy Hook. The fact that the admiral is really in Vermont was signaled Tuesday night on tall mountain peaks by bonfires and electric searchlights from one end of the state to the other.

Adm. Dewey is the guest of Dr. W. Seward Webb at his magnificent country residence, Shelburne Farms, and will not become the state's guest until Thursday at the capital, Montpelier. He came here on a special train from New York Tuesday morning occupying Dr. Webb's magnificent car the Elsmere.

While in New York state Adm. Dewey remained within the car chatting with the others of the party, but after crossing the Vermont line above Whitehall the admiral seemed to grow a little nervous, spoke of his homecoming repeatedly, and went on the rear platform, although the car was an observation one, to view the scenery. He seemed to be very happy, and to those who were around him it appeared almost as if the admiral had a touch of homesickness. As the train reached Shelburne the admiral watched the changing scenery intently. Here and there a flag was seen, but it was nature that had done the lavish painting on this great occasion, for the Vermont woods are one mass of autumn color. When the train pulled into Shelburne the villagers and folks from the surrounding towns, from even as far away as Burlington, had made up a crowd of nearly 3,000. The engine stopped just at the station, so that the rear car, the Elsmere, was abreast of a little grass plot down the track. When the train stopped Adm. Dewey stood upon the rear platform. Preceded by Dr. Webb, he walked across the lawn, where a landau drawn by two big black horses was in waiting. As the admiral walked across the lawn a band from Burlington played "Under the Eagle," a selection made at the special request of the admiral.

As Adm. Dewey stepped into the carriage, a salute of 17 guns was fired from behind a mask of shrubbery near by. Adm. Dewey remained erect in the carriage with hat and gloves in hand bowing and smiling to the people around him. He was dressed in a gray cutaway suit and wore a silk hat. Dr. Webb handed in the admiral's son, who took a seat. The crowd of eager people closed in around the carriage until the admiral looked into a sea of faces. Just at the steps of the carriage stood a man in working clothes, Michael McKenzie, of this town, noticeable because of his height. Suddenly McKenzie threw his cap into the air and yelled: "Let's give three cheers for Adm. Dewey, the hero of Manila." The cheers were given.

Along the road were drawn up 200 school children, each with a flag, and headed by their teacher. At a signal, the children sang a parody on "Yankee Doodle Dandy," beginning: "Yankee Dewey went to sea." The movement of the carriage was so timed that it reached the end of the line just as the chorus was reached and the admiral, who had stood up in passing, bowed his acknowledgments. The horses were then whipped up and the admiral was driven to Shelburne house at Shelburne Farms, three miles away.

A STREET DUEL.

Dr. H. J. Cameron and Dr. P. D. Mahoney Probably Fatally Wounded at Alexander City, Ala.—Ten Shots Fired.

ALEXANDER CITY, Ala., Oct. 11.—A street duel took place Tuesday evening between Dr. H. J. Cameron, of the Romanoff Land and Mining Co., and Dr. P. D. Mahoney, oculist. Both men were desperately angry for some cause not yet known to the public, and opened up a deadly fusillade with pistols, with little or no warning. Ten shots were fired, two striking Dr. Mahoney, one taking effect in the vital part of the stomach and the other in the thigh. Dr. Cameron was shot twice, one ball taking effect in the jaw and the other in his back. Both men are probably fatally wounded.

Five Years for Embezzlement.

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 11.—Harry Hough, the former assistant cashier of the Cocheo national bank, of Dover, was indicted by the grand jury of the United States district court here Tuesday on the charge of embezzling $5,500 of the bank's funds. Hough was arraigned later and pleaded nolo contendere and was sentenced to five years in jail.

The Record Broken.

BROCKTON, Mass., Oct. 11.—Eddie McDuffie broke every existing record from one to five miles inclusive at the board track here Tuesday afternoon. He rode the first two miles in less than three minutes.

HOME FOR ADM. SCHLEY.

The Woman's National Industrial League Takes the Initial Steps to Raise a Fund for That Purpose.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—The Woman's National Industrial league Wednesday night took the initial steps to raise a fund with which to purchase a home in Washington for Adm. Schley. An executive committee, with Mrs. Charlotte Smith as chairman, was appointed to push the movement and the Citizens' national bank of Washington was designated as the institution to which subscribers should send their subscriptions. Resolutions were adopted as follows:

Whereas, Rr. Adm. Winfield Scott Schley, U. S. N., has, by his patriotic devotion to duty, as displayed at the battle of Santiago, endeared himself to the American people.

Whereas, The members of the Woman's National Industrial league, desiring to express their gratitude to a brave, unselfish and modest officer, who has been an earnest and chivalrous friend to industrial women. Be it, therefore, Resolved, That the Women's Industrial league take the initial and necessary steps to promote public opinion, so as to enable them to secure funds to purchase a home for Adm. Schley, at the national capital, as a token of their high appreciation of his services in behalf of our country.

Be it further resolved, that the Woman's National Industrial League of America, appropriate $100 toward the expense for stationary, postage and printing, in sending out letters to the patriotic citizens of the United States, to request their co-operation in forming committees and assisting in securing funds to purchase a home, to be presented to Adm. Schley by the people of America. We also earnestly appeal to the press of the nation to assist us in our efforts.

OFFICERS' FAMILIES.

Gen. Otis Disapproves of Their Coming to Manila Until More Peaceful Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—A cablegram from Gen. Otis to the war department received late Wednesday afternoon confirms the press dispatches regarding Col. Schwan's movement on San Francisco de Malabon. Gen. Otis says:

"Schwan was successful Tuesday in driving insurgents south with loss from San Francisco de Malabon. He reports their force disintegrated and retiring on divergent roads, which are impassable for artillery or wagons. No intention of occupying this country permanently or temporarily; transportation will return by way of Rosario and column will move in direction of Dasmariñas, probably retiring on Imus. Country of no strategic importance."

Gen. Otis disapproves of officers' families joining them at Manila. Regarding this question he Wednesday cabled the department as follows: "Population Manila much congested. Provisions for officers' families cannot be made. Those already arrived together with families enlisted men have caused much perplexity. Would not permit my own family to come under existing circumstances; all officers and men here absent from Manila on duty; families should await more peaceful conditions."

Another message announced the arrival at Manila of the transport Victoria with 403 horses; 10 died en route and several found to be afflicted with glanders were shot. The Garonne sailed from Manila on the 7th inst. and the Athenian on the 9th, both for Seattle.

FIRING NEAR ANGELES.

The 13th Infantry Lost Two Battalion Commanders—Several Americans Were Wounded.

MANILA, Oct. 12.—During the early morning hours Wednesday there was some firing near Angeles, with the result that eight Americans were slightly wounded. Artillery was used and the enemy responded. Gen. MacArthur does not attach special significance to the incident.

A small party of Americans was fired upon by the Filipinos near Araguayan, two of our men being wounded. The 13th infantry lost two officers, Capt. Marion B. Saffold and Capt. Woodbridge Geary, both battalion commanders.

Ex-Senator Ingalls' Condition.

ATOHISON, Kan., Oct. 12.—Mrs. Ingalls Wednesday denied the report that her husband, ex-Senator John J. Ingalls, is suffering from cancer of the throat. Senator Ingalls has had tubercular laryngitis, a sequel to three attacks of the grip, but before he started for New Mexico recently the swelling had entirely disappeared and a complete recovery was expected.

The Plague at Key West.

KEY WEST, Fla., Oct. 12.—Eighteen new cases of yellow fever were reported during the past 24 hours. Dr. McAdam, of the Marine hospital service, is critically ill and his attending physicians have little hope of his recovery.

Joe Gans Got the Decision.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 12.—Joe Gans got the decision over Martin Judge, of Philadelphia, in a hot 80-round bout at the Eureka athletic club Wednesday night.

BOERS ADVANCE.

Soon the Roar of Guns Will Be Heard in the Transvaal.

Residents of Foreign Countries Are Joining the Boer Forces and Will Fight for the Republic—English Residents Swear Allegiance.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—A dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from Ladysmith dated Wednesday, alone among the specials received, declares that war has begun by the Boers in Natal. The correspondent says: "Free State burghers have seized a train at Harrismith, which was the property of the Natal government. Tuesday night a mounted patrol was stoned by Boers. The men's orders were not to fire unless they were fired upon."

LONDON, Oct. 12.—A dispatch from Glencoe Camp, dated Wednesday noon, says the burghers are reported to be beyond the president's control and hostilities are expected at any moment.

DURHAM, Oct. 12.—Authentic information from Ladysmith confirms the report that it is the intention of the Boers to occupy Newcastle immediately.

NEWCASTLE, Oct. 12.—No news has been received here as to the rumored advance of the Boers upon Charles town, but a movement in the Boer camp is reported.

Rt. Hon. Harry Escombe, former premier of Natal, intends to remain here.

The Free State border has been closed. Nearly all the inhabitants have left the town.

Up to midnight Wednesday no dispatches have arrived from the Cape, since the expiration of the ultimatum, so it is not yet known whether the first shot has been fired.

A telegram from Pretoria, timed 7:30 Tuesday evening says: "The situation is becoming hourly more critical. Numerous Americans, Germans, Frenchmen, Swedes, Belgians, Norwegians, Danes, Italians, Dutchmen, Swiss and Cape Afrikanders have gone to the border to fight for the Transvaal although they are not burghers, while many British residents have also taken the oath of allegiance. The hope is expressed by many that war will yet be averted."

Nothing since this has been received from Pretoria and doubtless telegraphic communication with the Transvaal is not cut.

The absence of news from the Cape since early morning is not due to an interruption of the cable, but to the immense pressure of work, the cables probably being nearly monopolized by British government dispatches, which take precedence of all others. Only two cables run to Cape Town from Europe and the one on the eastern coast is very slow, so that practically all the work is thrown on one Atlantic cable, which means that the present exasperating delay will recur repeatedly during the progress of the war, and that the newspaper dispatches will probably be very meager.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—Great preparations are being made at Southampton for the departure on Saturday of Gen. Sir Redvers Buller, and a great demonstration is anticipated. The duke of Connaught, the duke of York, Lord Lansdowne, Gen. Lord Wolseley and Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood are expected to accompany him to Southampton from London.

It is announced that the fleet of transports conveying Gen. Sir Redvers Buller's army corps will be escorted by war ships, while further dispatch boats and gunboats will be sent to South African waters.

The government has already expended $5,000,000 in naval and military preparations, the orders placed with contractors this week alone amounting to $600,000. The authorities anticipating a serious reduction in the output of the South African coal mines, has ordered 5,000 tons of English steam coal to be sent to the Cape for the use of the war ships.

CONYNGHAM GREENE.

Rumored That the British Diplomatic Agent at Pretoria Has Been Assassinated—Rumor Unconfirmed.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—It is rumored that Conyngham Greene, the British diplomatic agent at Pretoria, has been assassinated there.

The report however is unconfirmed and is discredited at the colonial office. The rumor that Mr. Greene had been murdered is of doubtful origin and is considered extremely improbable as it is believed that in obedience to orders from the imperial government Mr. Greene had already left Pretoria confiding the care of British interests to United States Consul Marcum.

Telegrams Censorship.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The military authorities in South Africa have instituted a censorship over all telegrams in order to prevent information regarding British movements from reaching the Boers.

Gen. McClelland Seriously Ill.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 12.—Gen. John A. McClelland is again in a serious condition. He is nearly 90 years old and for that reason there is much apprehension of the result of his present illness.

A REUNION IN THE RAIN.

President McKinley and Party Attend the Meeting of the Blue and the Gray at Evansville, Ind.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 12.—A heavy rain fall, the first in two months, that set in early Wednesday morning and continued all day had the effect of diminishing the expected attendance at the first national re-union of the Blue and Gray, notwithstanding President McKinley and his cabinet were in the city part of the time. This was the principal day of the re-union. President McKinley and his cabinet arrived from Chicago at 9 o'clock and left for the north at noon.

The presidential party was escorted from the train through the drenching rain, which did not drown out the tremendous ovation from patriotic veteran throats, to the tri-state fair grounds, where the president was introduced by Gov. Mount and addressed 10,000 people. The president remarked before he left that this was the greatest reception in the rain that he had ever been tendered. Speeches were also made by Secretary of the Treasury Sage, Secretary of the Navy Long, Attorney General Griggs, United States Senator Fairbanks and others.

The president and his party were then escorted back to the train just at noon and left for the northwest. No exercises were held in the afternoon, which was devoted to drills by military organizations.

At 9 o'clock in the evening a banquet was held in a hotel. S. D. P. Gillett, late lieutenant commander of the United States navy, acted as toast master.

The first speech was made by Col. W. A. Hemphill, of Atlanta Ga., on "Our defenders on land and sea."

"The United States senate" was the topic of a speech by Senator C. W. Fairbanks, of Indiana.

He was followed by Col. A. J. West, of Atlanta, Ga., who spoke on "A generation after."

Col. West said in part: "Show me the prosperous business men of this generation and I will show you the men who saw their country's flag flutter in the gloom of the wilderness, where the angry divisions rolled in the bloody mire. Show me the men upon whose shoulders this country rests to-day, and I will point out to you the men who rallied around their country's standard at Missionary Ridge and Gettysburg. I would rather have the record of an American soldier in the civil war, discharging his duty as he saw it, than to have that of Napoleon, with his selfish, vaulting ambition."

"The Blue and the Gray" was the topic of a speech by F. B. Posey, of Evansville.

Col. Josiah Patterson, of Memphis, Tenn., discussed "The Southern Patriot."

Col. Patterson said in part: "It is not difficult to account for the patriotism of the southern people. A common heritage in the revolutionary war; in the formation and adoption of the constitution; in the administration of the government, its progress and development; and in the great names which adorn our history, was like some great centrifugal force impelling us to a common destiny. The broad patriotism, the unbounded benevolence and the enlightened statesmanship of Abraham Lincoln were far-reaching factors in the problem."

"We are here as members of the family, not as guests, to unite with our fellow citizens throughout the republic in a vow to forever maintain and defend the honor of its flag and to preserve for ourselves and posterity the integrity of its free institutions." Gov. D. W. Jones, of Little Rock, Ark., paid a glowing tribute to "the old veteran at the passing of the nineteenth century."

Gen. John C. Black, of Chicago, took as his topic "The northern patriot."

John W. Lockett, of Henderson, Ky., recounted the victories of "The Stars and Stripes."

He said in part: "Standing at the opening door of a new century, with thankfulness and praise to God that we live in this land of constitutional freedom, we salute with heart and soul this banner of the union."

The banquet closed long after midnight with a speech from Gov. Mount, of Indiana, on "Our guests," in which he pictured the gathering of the veterans of the blue and the gray as alike guests of the state and of the country, re-united, fraternalized and standing under one flag.

Ed McDuffee's Fast Mile.

BROCKTON, Mass., Oct. 12.—Eddie McDuffee went after the two-mile record here Wednesday and cut four seconds off from the record he made Tuesday afternoon, same distance. His first mile was made in 1:23 3-5 and the second in 1:25 2-5.

Ill With Yellow Fever.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Oct. 12.—The Mobile line steamer Flandera, Capt. Hanson, has arrived here with her first officer and chief engineer ill with yellow fever which they had contracted at Havana. The chief engineer, it is thought, will die. The ship has been strictly quarantined.

Died at Pinar Del Rio.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Gen. Brooke reports the death at Pinar Del Rio of Private John English, Company M, 1st Infantry, of typhoid fever.

Where a Good Pistol Is Admired.

Hon. William Wortham, long state treasurer of Texas, was in a New York jewelry store one day when he noticed a showcase filled with splendid jeweled revolvers, with silver and gold grips and chased barrels, having precious stones set into the butts.

"Lemme see one of those guns," he said to the clerk.

"Which one, sir?" The gold one with the big ruby in the handle. The clerk took it from the case. It was marked $300, and it looked even worth more. The Texan took it tenderly in both hands and held it admiringly up to his light. Then drawing himself up to his full height, which was six feet and a half, he rested the revolver upon his left elbow, crooked for the purpose, and looked over the sights down the long store. Those persons who saw involuntarily dodged.

"Say," said Mr. Wortham, with quiet but intense enthusiasm, as he returned the weapon, "if I was to wear that gun down in my state the people would be falling down on their knees begging to be killed with it!" —Chicago Evening News.

The Philippine War.

This contest is proving much more stubborn than we had anticipated. It needs a vigorous contest to straighten matters out. We should tackle the Philippines and overcome them as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters does dyspepsia, indigestion, malaria, fever and ague, and liver and kidney diseases. The battle is short and decisive, and for fifty years the Bitters have always won. If you are ill, and don't know what's wrong, try it.

The Three Tellers.

"Can you tell me," asked the summer man, "What are the three quickest modes of communication?" "Well, no," replied the summer girl. "Hal, Hal, Hal," the telephone, telegraph, and tell-a-gram," and now he wonders why she returned his ring in the middle of the season. —Philadelphia Call.

Non-Territorial Expansion.

Means paying rent for a poor farm. Now is the time to secure a good farm on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway in Marinette County, Wisconsin, where the crops are of the best, work plenty, fine markets, excellent climate, pure soft water, land sold cheap and on long time. Why rent a farm when you can buy one for less than you pay for rent? Address C. E. Rollins, Land Agent, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Good for Girls Only.

Dewey anecdotes relate that the admiral traces his start in life to a severe whipping a school teacher gave him, whereupon he resolved to lead a new life. This anecdote will be read out loud by the mothers, but it will not fool any boy. It is harder to fool a boy than a girl with fairy tales. —Atchison Globe.

Sore Hands

Red Rough Hands Itching Burning Palms and Painful Finger Ends.

One Night Treatment

Soak the hands on retiring, in a strong, hot creamy lather of CUTICURA SOAP. Dry, and anoint freely with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purest of emollients. Wear during the night, old, loose kid gloves, with the finger ends cut off and air holes cut in the palms. For red, rough, chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, with shapeless nails and painful finger ends, this treatment is simply wonderful.

Pure and Sweet

and free from every blemish is the skin, scalp, and hair cleansed, purified, and beautified by CUTICURA SOAP. It removes the cause of disfiguring eruptions, loss of hair, and baby blemishes, viz.: The clogged, irritated, and sluggish condition of the PORES. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE—namely, TWENTY-FIVE CENTS—the best skin and complexion soap and the best toilet and baby soap in the world.

THE NEGRO PROBLEM

Booker T. Washington Thinks It Is Settling Itself.

How He Would Have the Colored Race Act Toward the Whites—Work Accomplished at Tuskegee Institute.

[Special Tuskegee (Ala.) Letter.]

The race question, in America, in spite of occasional outrages on both sides, is gradually settling itself, and a larger part of the work of solving the problem is being accomplished by that portion of the population whose skin contains the greater amount of coloring pigment. Booker T. Washington, who may, at the present time, be regarded as their representative man, although there are many others as able but not so well known, believes that while holding firmly and securely to everything guaranteed by the constitution of the United States, or that is fundamental to citizenship, "the colored people should make every effort possible to secure the friendship, confidence and cooperation of their white neighbors in the south." They should not be "tricksters," but act firmly from principle, and gain and retain respect. They should endeavor to obtain the friendly interest of the southern white man, thus inducing him to help make laws that will, in the truest sense, elevate the negro. He advises the latter to do more and more of his own thinking and in a modest, temperate manner exercise his political rights instead of being led by political bosses or demagogues. Mr. Washington further believes that a permanent cure for many of our present evils will come through a property and educational test for voting applied honestly and fairly to both races. This will cut off a large number of ignorant voters now proving such a demoralizing factor in politics. But through the industrial development of the negro the greatest results will come.

Education along this line will make him an intelligent producer, of imme-could learn and work their own way, he walked and worked his passage to that point, where he found himself surrounded by an atmosphere of business. Christian influences and a spirit of self-help that awakened every latent faculty and brought a realization of what it meant to be a man instead of a piece of transferable property. On finishing his school course, in 1881, he began, at Tuskegee, Ala., what he intends to be his life work. Without a dollar, in a church and small shanty, with one teacher and 30 pupils, he established a school, which, with its spirit of work and industrial thrift, aided by the state and by some people of the north, has developed into an institution of 1,000 students, 81 teachers and 38 buildings. From the ranks of these students are to be sent out well-educated, self-reliant young men and women to live among the ten millions of colored people of the south, and help to elevate them to their own condition.

At Tuskegee institute, industrial training goes hand in hand with mental and moral teaching. Mr. Washington so earnestly desires that the colored people should be expert workmen at all the trades that students without funds are enabled to work out all their expenses at the school. This, at the same time, has greatly aided in the development of the institution itself. All but three of the 38 buildings have been erected by the students. Many of the largest are brick, which certain of the pupils here learning the trades they are to follow in after life have manufactured in the brickyard of the school. This yard produces not only all the bricks they require, but many thousands more which are sold in the surrounding country each year. At first Mr. Washington, having no money, was unable to impart such practical knowledge as he desired, and had to teach from books alone. But he was fortunate in the possession of a friend who was willing to loan $500 to pay towards the purchase of a farm near Tuskegee.

The school was soon moved to this land. The boys were taught indoors during a part of the day, and passed the remainder of the time in putting the land in order and making bricks. A skilled man was hired to instruct in ciate value to the community. He may then become a property holder and as such a thoughtful and conservative voter. With the increase of his property interests he gains in importance as a tax payer and necessary consultations with his white neighbor about voting measures will follow. The black man has implicit confidence in the white man's advice in business, legal and religious matters, and when he shall with equal freedom be able to consult him regarding politics the situation will at once change for the better. A large number of colored people in every county, owning their own neat and comfortable homes and a bank account, and cooperating with their white neighbors in every manly way for the development of their own communities, will aid greatly in changing the present status of the negro as a citizen. In Mr. Washington's opinion, when both races shall cooperate in politics, business matters, religion and education, the problem will in a great measure be solved and political outrages cease.

Although so well known and widely respected, Booker T. Washington is ignorant of the date of his own birth. His life began as a slave on a plantation in Virginia. He must have been a very small boy when the war broke out, for he once said: "Night after night, before the dawn of day, on an old plantation in Virginia, I recall the form of my sainted mother bending over the bundle of rags that enveloped my body, on a dirt floor, breathing a fervent prayer to heaven that 'Massa Lincoln' might succeed and that some day she and I might be free." After the close of the war, Booker Washington went with his brothers to West Virginia, where they worked in the coal mines for pay in money. One day, on seeing a negro laboriously spelling out a newspaper paragraph to a group of colored people, who gazed at him with open-mouthed wonder and veneration, a desire for study was awakened in the boy. He obtained a situation to do chores for a lady who taught him to read.

Soon after, on hearing that at Hampregard to turning them the first year, and after that the students did all the work themselves. Other young men learn bricklaying, and others still to be carpenters. A large tract of valuable timber land is now owned by the institute upon which a good sawmill has been erected, all lumber needed being cut here. Joiner work and carriage making are taught. All the cars, wagons and carriages used on the place are made on the premises, and the hickory lumber wagons are in such demand that all not needed are readily sold to surrounding farmers. It is always intended to have a building in process of construction, for the benefit of the building classes. This year it is a trades school building. Last year it was a handsome brick church, with a seating capacity of 2,000. The plans were made by the instructor in mechanical and architectural drawing, a colored man named Taylor. The pews and cornices were designed by students. Men learning tin-smithing, slating and putting in of electrical and steam-heating apparatus, finished the work. Each year men and women expert in different trades are graduated and largely sought as teachers in other institutions. They know their lines of business well, and seem to have no difficulty in obtaining employment.

A large part of the furniture used at the school is built here. Harness-making, saddlery, printing, tailoring, black-smithing, painting, plain and fancy cooking, candy making, millinery, dressmaking, laundry work and even nursing, under a capable trained nurse, are taught. There is a foundry and machine shop.

As a large percentage of the southern negroes must live in the country, especial attention is given to agriculture. Mr. George W. Carver, head of this department, is a graduate of Iowa state college. A recently issued pamphlet of his tells how he raised between two and three hundred bushels of sweet potatoes on an acre of ground where the average yield is less than 50 bushels per acre. A large herd of cows and a good dairy and creamery furnish opportunity for instruction in dairy work, to which especial attention is given. For the last ten years a conference of negro farmers, from a dozen states, has met annually under the guidance of Mr. Washington at Tuskegee, to "talk over" their affairs. They are composed of those born too soon to enjoy educational advantages. These people exhibit such intense interest in the proceedings that their "one day in the year" is much too short for them.

And this is the race problem working itself out in the heart of the section where those deeds are sometimes committed that cause so much discussion pro and con by those at a distance who are ignorant of the real condition of affairs in the black belt of the south.

AN UNCUT DIAMOND.

As Large as a Hickory Nut and Worth
Nearly One Hundred Thousand Dollars.A New York jeweler the other day brought out a small package no larger than a hen's egg which was wrapped up in a common piece of white paper.
Undoing it he showed what appeared to be yellowish white pebbles about the size of a large hickory nut, says the Sun of that city."A mere trifle," he said, "but worth nearly $100,000."The onlooker was amazed and took it in his hand. "You mean $100," he suggested."No, $100,000. It is a South African diamond that is still uncut, and there are about 150 carats in it. At the rate of $50 a carat this would make more than $90,000, but, of course, the larger stones are more valuable. I suppose this is the largest diamond ever brought to this country. The name of the importer? That's a secret which we are not allowed to divulge."Now that uncut diamonds are free of duty the importations are on a much larger scale than heretofore. The one in question has been considerably ground down, but had no polish or sparkle to suggest that it was a diamond at all.

MAINE CHEWING TOBACCO.

Farmers Flavoring It with Maple Syrup Just as Their Grandfathers Did.Since the price of plug tobacco went up, a good many farmers in Maine have been making their own chewing tobacco, just as their grandfathers did.
Tobacco seed is bought in Virginia or Kentucky, and planted in hot beds or boxes early in the spring. After danger from frost has passed, the seedlings are transplanted in rich ground and allowed to grow until September 1. The stalks are cut off near the ground on a dry day and the whole plant, with leaves attached is hung in aloft to cure. In May the dry leaves are stripped off, and when the ribs are taken out the mass is wetted with a sweetened water containing an infusion of licorice root. As soon as the flow of maple sap diminishes, the spigots are taken from the trees and the auger holes that held the spigots are crowded full of the prepared tobacco leaves. A tapering pine plug is then driven into the hole on top of the tobacco, and sawed off flush with the tree.In midsummer, when the maple flavor has had time to permeate the mass and the wad of leaves has turned dark and shrunken to half its original bulk, the plug is bored out and a solid cylinder of excellent chewing tobacco is found. Nearly all the farmers in northern and western Penobscot county are making their own chewing tobacco this year.

MIGHT DESTROY ALL LIFE.

Tesla, the Great Electrician, Afraid That He Might Ignite the Atmosphere.In a signed article in the current number of the Electrical Review, Nicola Tesla describes some of his experiments in the line of electrical currents of high voltage, and gives details of the coil which he uses. "The discharges of such a coil," he adds, "when of an electro-motive force of a few millions of volts, excite powerful affinities in the atmospheric nitrogen causing it to combine readily with the oxygen and other elements, particularly in the presence of aqueous vapor. So energetic are these actions and so strangely do such powerful charges behave that I have often experienced a fear that the atmosphere might be ignited, a terrible possibility, which Sir William Crookes, with his piercing intellect, has already considered. Who knows but such a calamity is possible? And who can tell with certainty that periodical cessations of organic life on the globe might not be caused by ignition of the air and destruction of its life-sustaining qualities, accidentally or as a con-sequence of some accumulative change?
A lump of coal will lie for centuries unaffected in contact with oxygen, but the combustion once started, the process continues as long as there are elements to combine."

A QUICKSILVER FOUNTAIN.

An Odd Exhibit from Queensland
Which is Soon to Be Made in London.The government of Queensland are going to show the world, or such portion of it as may visit the forthcoming exhibition at Earl's court, that the colony can produce quicksilver equally with America, Spain and Austria, says the London Mail.A mere pool of quicksilver in a glass case would be no indication at all, so those responsible for the arrangement of the Queensland section propose to show this precious liquid mineral lending a new and effective beauty to a fountain.Mr. C. Bright, F.R.S.D., A. M. Inst. C.
E., is the engineer responsible for this novel departure in the way of fountains, and he gave some interesting details of its construction to a Daily Mail representative the other day."This," he said, "can hardly be called a fountain in the ordinary acceptation of the word, for the difficulties of dealing with such a heavy body as mercury are too great to allow of a jet such as one sees playing in Trafalgar square.
What we are going to have is an arrangement of two basins, one above the other. These will be of iron, enameled black, to give a greater effect to the falling quicksilver."

FISH IN HOT WATER.

If We May Believe This Account They Enjoy It and Seem to Grow
Fat in It.A fish is naturally a cold-blooded animal, but if you take a fish and keep him in slightly tepid water for a month or so he will soon get used to it, and be perfectly healthy, says Public Opinion.Then, if you like, you can increase the water's temperature. The fish will not pay any attention to the change if it be made gradually, and will eat a good deal more than in quite cold water. Increase the heat still more and he will develop a strong appetite and his skin will look clean and glossy.You may go on with this treatment for any length of time, always slightly adding to the heat of the water, and giving the fish more and more to eat, until the water is as hot as your hand can bear. If you then put the fish in a radiated aquarium—that is, an aquarium with heat playing on a part of it, so that one-half of the water is colder than the other—the fish will keep to the hot part and bask in it. It is said that a fish will even live a little while without outward discomfort in water not a great deal below the boiling point. A fish certainly seems to derive benefit from living in hot water, and is better entertained after such a life when it is dead.

Chinese Politeness.

When in Shanghai Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia were given an amusing example of Chinese politeness.
While visiting a notable mandarin their host asked through the interpreter the age of Prince Henry. On being told that the emperor's brother is a little over 36 the mandarin turned to the princess and said: "You appear 50." He then inquired the age of the princess, who is 32. The interpreter, Herr Voigt, an honest citizen of Stettin, hesitated to inform the princess what the mandarin replied on learning her age.
Prince Henry, however, has a smattering of Chinese, and laughingly commanded: "Out with it, Voigt!" The Chinese flatterer had told the princess:
"You look 60."More Precious Than Diamonds.
Among the rarest of precious stones the green garnet is probably the most valuable. This gem is of superb, rich shade, far more brilliant than that of the emerald. A green garnet easily commands double the price of a pure diamond of equal size, because it is so exceedingly rare, while red garnets are so common that their cost is trifling.

OBITUARY.

Funeral Announcements of Deceased Citizens.

Miss Ida Belle Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Allen, of Duncan avenue, died Tuesday morning at four o'clock, after an illness of several weeks of typhoid fever. The deceased was an exceptionally bright and lovely young lady, aged twenty years, who graduated last June from Hamilton College, and her death is a sad blow to her parents, who have lately moved to this city. The funeral services were held at ten o'clock yesterday morning at the residence by Prof. Hagerman, of Hamilton College, and the remains were consigned to their last earthly resting place in the Paris cemetery. The pall-bearers were Frank Bowden, Dwight Bowden, Banks Neal, Sanford Allen, Frank Allen and Trigg Wood. The deceased was the valedictorian of the class of '99 at Hamilton, and a number of her schoolmates, accompanied by Miss Warford, came down to pay their last respects to their beloved young friend.

Joel S. Berry, who was born in this county February 24, 1830, died at his home in Paris, October 8th, 1899. Funeral services were conducted by Eld. Robert Graham of Lexington in the Christian Church at North Middletown where, from early manhood, Mr. Berry had held membership. In the cemetery near by, his remains were laid to rest in the presence of a large gathering of his friends.

Mr. Berry was a prosperous farmer of this community and was well known as a breeder of short-horns and trotting horses. He was for many years director and at one time President of the North Middletown bank. He was noted for his tenacious adherence to his political and religious opinions and for his open handed hospitality.

He was twice married—first, to Miss Catherine Butler, one of nature's noblest women. There were born to them five daughters and two sons. He idolized both mother and children. Mr. Berry married a second time Miss Mary Ware of Lexington, Ky. To her were born two children—a son and a daughter. He is survived by his devoted wife and nine children, Walter Berry, Mrs. Alice Cannon, Mrs. Florence Bryant, all of Missouri; James Berry, of Covington; Miss Carrie of Hamilton College, Lexington; Miss Sarah, of Christian Orphan School, Fulton, Mo.; Miss Annie of Fanning Orphan School, Nashville, Tenn; Ware Berry, and Miss Louise, of Paris.

Mr. Berry having unfortunately lost both his health and his property, located in Paris about nine years ago.

His faithful wife and children have the warmest sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

Pleurisy

Pleurisy and pneumonia are frequently developed, in a very short space of time, from a common cold; and, if such an acute inflammation of the lungs is not promptly allayed, the worst may happen. With the aid of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, however, you need not have any fear; for this great remedy speedily subdues the inflammation, eases the pain in breathing and always effects a cure in a wonderfully short time.

NUPTIAL KNOTS.

Engagements, Announcements And Solennizations of The Marriage Vow.

RAY—VAUGHT.

Mr. Charles Dorsey Ray, of this city, and Miss Kate Hampton Vaught, of Maysville, were united in marriage at a beautiful green and white wedding at high noon Wednesday in the Maysville Methodist Church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. O. A. Vaught, father of the bride.

The chancel was banked with ferns and interspersed with white flowers, making an attractive background for the nuptial scene. The bride, who is an exceptionally lovely girl, possessing many admirable qualities, was very pretty in white Paris muslin, en train, wearing the customary veil and carrying bride's roses.

The bridesmaids were her sisters, Misses Louise Vaught and Sallie Vaught, both gowned in green organdie, and wearing large black hats trimmed with long plumes. Both carried bunches of ferns.

The ushers were Mr. John Williams, of this city, and Mr. Vaught, of Versailles a cousin of the bride.

Mr. Ray, the groom, is a son of Dr. J. Ed Ray of this city, and is a popular young man of sterling worth, who has a legion of friends to wish happiness to him and to his bonny bride.

Among the guests from a distance were Mrs. Anna Hart, Mrs. B. B. Hutchcraft, Mrs. Junius Clay, Misses Mayme McClintock, Bessie Holliday, Mary Irvine Davis, Col. J. G. Craddock, Judge Chas. D. Webb, Mr. V. K. Shipp and son, and Mr. John Williams, of this city, and Mrs. W. H. Miller, of Millersburg. They were also guests at a charming wedding breakfast at the Vaught home.

Mr. Ray and bride left Wednesday afternoon for a trip to New York and other Eastern cities.

METEER-CLAYBROOK.

The nuptials of Mr. Robert Meteere and Miss Frances Claybrook were quietly celebrated yesterday afternoon at four o'clock at the Claybrook home near Hutchison. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Rutherford, of this city.

The bride, who is noted as a lovely and charming young lady, the daughter of Mr. Elden Claybrook, was becomingly gowned in white silk.

The groom is a worthy and popular young farmer of the Hutchison precinct. The bridesmaids were Miss Fannie Mann, of this city, and Miss Grace Giltner, of Hutchison. The groomsmen were Mr. Will Meteere, brother of the groom, and Mr. George Hunt, of Lexington.

After partaking of a wedding supper at the bride's home, Mr. Meteere and wife drove to Lexington in a carriage to take the C. & O. train for a wedding trip in the East.

The engagement is announced of Miss Bird Rogers, of Georgetown, and Mr. James E. Lipscomb, of Danville, Va. The marriage will occur on November 15th.

The Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette yesterday printed the following of the Knights Templar Conclave in that city: Sir Knight Walter Fischer, of Maysville, and Miss Kathryn Lowe, of Paris, Ky., were married in the parlors of the Palace Hotel at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. Rev. Gervaise Roughton officiating. Friends and relatives of the bride and groom in attendance were J. H. Cummings and Dr. W. S. Yayell, of Maysville, Mrs. Oscar Johnson, Millersburg; Miss Walker, Edgar Walker, and John Doyle, Flemingsburg, and Ed. Myall, Paris. Mr. and Mrs. Fischer will remain here till Saturday.

Sacrificed to Blood Poison.

Those who have never had Blood Poison can not know what a desperate condition it can produce. This terrible disease which the doctors are totally unable to cure, is communicated from one generation to another, inflicting its taint upon countless innocent ones.

Some years ago I was inoculated with poison by a nurse who infected my babe with blood taint. The little one was unequal to the struggle, and its life was yielded up to the fearful poison. For six long years I suffered untold misery. I was covered with sores and ulcers from head to foot, and no language can express my feelings of woe during those long years. I had the best medical treatment. Several physicians successively treated me, but all to no purpose. The mercury and potash seemed to add fuel to the awful flame which was devouring me. I was advised by friends who had seen wonderful cures made by it, to try Swift's Specific. We got two bottles, and I felt hope again revive in my breast—hope for health and happiness again. I improved from the start, and a complete and perfect cure was the result. S. S. S. is the only blood remedy which reaches desperate cases.
Mrs. T. W. LEE,

Others who purchased are anxious to see what it will bring forth.

Successful Shooting Tournament

The shoot given Tuesday and Wednesday at Alfred Clay's, by the Hill Top Gun Club, was the most successful ever given by that club. The Hill Top Handicap, on the first day, was won by Jake Gay, of Clark, who killed fifteen straight birds. Quincy Ward was second in this event, scoring 14 out of 15. A. R. Elliot, of Kansas City, won most of the money in the matches on the second day. Among the strangers present were Mayor J. M. Lang and Mr. Roberts, of Paducah; D. H. Willie, of the Cincinnati Gun Club; J. J. Halliwell, of the U. M. C. Co., of Bridgeport, Connecticut; and many shooters from Mt. Sterling, Richmond, Georgetown, Winchester and Paris. Messrs. Alfred Clay and T. H. Clay, Jr., will attend the big shoot at Louisville to-day and to-morrow. Alfred Clay is the present champion of Kentucky, having won the big handicap last year at Louisville.

Efforts are being made to organize an Elk lodge at Mayville.

Four new members were elected to the Paris lodge Tuesday night at the regular meeting.

The Elk's Carnival, which is in progress in Louisville this week, is a mammoth show and is amusing 10,000 people every day. It is as good as a circus and twice as big. The show will continue all of next week. Wednesday will be Elk Day, and all Paris Elks are requested to assemble at the Louisville Hotel. The baby show Wednesday had over two hundred entries.

The Lexington lodge gave a social session Tuesday night in honor of Bandmaster John C. Weber, of Cincinnati, who is a member of the Cincinnati lodge.

Mr. Weber has played with Robinson's circus, Michael Brand, Theodore Thomas, Rice's Minstrels, the Emma Abbott Opera Co., and other organizations. He has been at the head of Weber's Military Band for nine years, and now furnishes music for the Latonia races and four Cincinnati theatres. His band is playing this week at the Lexington trots.

Golden Jubilee Convention.

The Golden Jubilee Convention of the Missionary Societies of the Christian Church began yesterday in Cincinnati with delegates present from every State and Territory in the United States, and from Canada, England, Australia, New Zealand, China, Japan, India and Jamaica. It is expected that between 10,000 and 12,000 people will be present during the meeting, which will continue over Sunday.

Sixty Parisians, a car load from Millersburg, Carlisle and Mayville, and a large number from Richmond and Winchester, went to Cincinnati yesterday morning over the L. & N. Capt. Throckmorton's train was so heavy that two engines were required to haul it. Yesterday afternoon twenty-five more Parisians left for the convention.

It is just fifty years since the American Christian Missionary Society of this church was organized in Cincinnati, and twenty-five years since the Christian Board of Missions was organized in that city. The Foreign Missionary of the church was organized twenty-five years ago in Louisville. The Christian Church now has over 1,100,000 members. The first church of that denomination in Kentucky, was organized at Cane Ridge, in this county, by Barton Stone.

Imperial spectacles and eyeglasses have perfect lenses, always perfectly centered and made of purest material, set in frames of the highest elasticity and consequently of great durability, united with the utmost lightness and elegance. When both frames and lenses are scientifically fitted by Dr. C. H. Bowen's system they always give satisfaction for they are perfect. Never buy cheap spectacles, nor of men who do not know how to fit them. You will get poorly adjusted spectacles, or poor, imperfect lenses, and be better off without any glasses than with either of these defects. Buy Imperial spectacles of a reliable, scientific dealer, and they will last longer without change and be cheapest in the end.

We have engaged the services of Dr. C. H. Bowen who will visit our store on the second and last Thursdays of each month and invite all to call and have their eyes examined, for which there is no charge. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

THE WRECK.

Across the night a gray moon fell
Through bars of shifting cloud, to set
Where from roof and white wave met Suddenly at the doors of hell.

It saw the great ship's dying throes,
As one with dim, drawn face, who sees
A dumb beast in its agonies,
And may not help, and cannot go;
And, peeping still from wind-wrought caves,
It watched amid the swirl and strife
Unlovely atoms, each a life,
Tossed on the upsurge of the waves.
Sick to the heart with fear untold
Of that mad slaughter half-dead,
It crept behind a cloud, and died.
Then the black night was icy cold.
Last, out of chaos calmly bright,
Day dawned, and with a greeting roar,
Triumphant ocean flung to shore
His broken playthings of the night.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE RESCUE OF ANGIOLA.

The next day, as the big gun from the citadel boomed on the twelfth hour and all the bells of the town changed north the time, five horsemen rode through the gate of St. Angelo, whose doors were spread wide open. The single sentry on duty paced sleepily up and down; he was looking for his noontide siesta, and the guard of a half-score of Baglioni's lances lay with their armor off, basking in the midday sun. A sullen officer, who had evidently dined to some purpose, reclined on his back, half in, half out of the shade of a few olive trees that grew to the left of the gate, and the ruby on his cheeks showed up all the brighter against the green of the grass on which he was stretched. The horsemen were myself and four followers. We had taken the route I went the day before with Gian, and the plan I had formed was this: On my gaining admittance to the house Jacopo and Bando Nere were to put themselves at the door and engage the guard there in conversation. Gian and the lackey were to hold the horses. As soon as I ascertained the position of Angiola's room I would blow shrilly on a whistle I had purchased for the purpose. My men at the door, who were armed with arquebuses as well as their swords, would hold the passage, and I should try and account for the Cavaliere Paolo and hear off the prize. If we succeeded, we could easily make the gate, and then, the road to St. Jerome lay open before us. The fact that the attempt was to be made in broad daylight, too, would be a safeguard, as no one would dream that such a deed, usually done under cover of night, was to be attempted at this hour. I had partly paved the way for my entrance by my call of yesterday, and was provided with a sufficiently plausible story to keep the cavaliere engaged, whilst I took stock of his surroundings. Jacopo, too, had been carefully drilled as to how he was to announce me, and the question resolved itself into hard hitting, and a little luck. I had dressed myself with particular care, wearing my buff coat under a gay jerkin, and a short velvet cloak hung from my shoulders. This almost gala attire was to act as a further blind, and give all the appearance of a mere visit of ceremony. There was, of course, the possibility of my being refused admittance, and of the Cavaliere Paolo declining to see me; but this was not probable, and if it did happen I was ready for a bold stroke, and for this Bando Nere carried with him a grenade with which to blow open the door. As it turned out, however, we had no difficulty on this score. On reaching the house I glanced up, and saw a face peering at us through the opening of one of the windows above, but it was almost immediately withdrawn. Jacopo dismounted and knocked firmly. The same performance, I have described, of opening a grating was gone through, but on my name being mentioned the porter shut his peephole, and there was the sound of the removal of a bar, the clank of chains, and the door swung open with a sullen groan, disclosing a hall, in which stood two men, completely armed, their arquebuses at the ready in their hands, whilst the doorkeeper himself, a sturdy knave, stood full in the entrance, swinging a bunch of keys.

"Is the Cavaliere Paolo Baglioni within?" I asked, as I dismounted, taking it for granted I was to be received, from the preparation I saw made.

"He is, signore—be pleased to follow."

With a warning glance to Jacopo I stepped in, finding myself in a hall of middle size, the walls discolored with age, and chipped and cracked in many places—clearly the Casino Baglioni needed repairs. At the end of the hall was a spiral staircase, whose stone steps, worn to a hollow in the middle by the passing and repassing of feet, marked its great age. Up this narrow stairway I followed the man, until we reached a corridor, hung on each side with rusty suits of armor and old and tattered banners. The place was very damp, and there was a musty smell about it, as if no pure air ever came that way. It was evident that the cavaliere was on the alert, for a man was on guard here, armed like those below, with sword and arquebus. To him my guide addressed himself.

"He has come," he said, jerking his thumb backwards at me.

"Well, announce him," said the sentinel.

"That is for you," answered the janitor, "if I had enough of Pluto this morning." With this he turned on his heel and ran back downstairs, jingling his keys.

The sentry stood still, however, and after waiting for half a minute I spoke, my blood rising a little within me.

"Will you be good enough to announce the Cavaliere di Savelli—on an urgent affair?"

The man turned round to a closed door behind him, rapping at it with his mailed hand. From inside I heard a shuffling noise, and heavy boots lurching against the door, and there was a scratching at the wood. No answer, however, came to the knock.

"Knock again," I said, a little impatiently, and this time a deep voice called out:

"Enter."

I placed my hand on the door to open it, when the sentry spoke with unexpected civility:

"Take care of the beast, signore!"

"The beast—what beast?" I asked, pretending not to know anything of Pluto's existence.

"His excellency's bear—do not fear it—else it might injure you—cospetto! But it is a perfect fiend if you run from it. It killed a poor woman the other day."

"Thanks, friend, I will beware," I answered, and pushed open the door, springing back a yard as I did so, for with a short roar that echoed through the house a huge bear rose on his hind legs and struck out at my face with his claws.

"Diavolo! go back," shouted the sentry to the animal, and I whipped out my sword; but the animal merely stood in the open doorway, making no further advance, his great jaws open and puffing like a blacksmith's bellows.

"Cospetto! excellency, call off the bear," shouted the sentry again; indeed he seemed positively to hate the animal, and from inside came a low, deep-toned but mocking laugh. "Come back, Pluto—down, you brute—down!" then there was a heavy "thud," the tinkling of shivered glass, and the bear, dropping on its forefeet, slumped back into the room. I was considerably startled and not a little angry, but, concealing these feelings, stepped boldly into the room, keeping my drawn sword still in my hand.

"The Cavaliere di Baglioni?" I inquired.

"At the Cavaliere di Savelli's service," and a tall figure rose from a lounge chair and surveyed me. I confess that my heart began to beat a little faster when I saw the man against whom I was to pit myself. He was far above the middle height, and proportionately broad. His grizzled hair, parted in the middle, hung down straightly to his neck, and a thick gray beard and mustache hid his mouth and chin. A cruel hooked nose, almost Hebrew in shape, was set between a pair of small and piercing eyes. His complexion was deathly pale, and by the light which fell from the barred window I saw beneath the skin the little red lines of swollen veins which marked an intemperate man. At a small table beside the chair was a pack of cards and a glass half filled with red wine, the bottle from which the wine was taken was lying in fragments at the door, where it had fallen and broken to bits, after being flung at Pluto. The bear was now beside his master, facing me, his huge head held down and swaying from side to side. We remained for half a minute staring at each other, and then Baglioni spoke again, with his deep, sneering accent:

"Is it usual for the Cavaliere di Savelli to pay visits with a drawn sword in his hand?"

"Is it usual," I replied, "for gentlemen to be received by having a savage beast set at bay?"

"Oh, Pluto!" and he touched the bear; "Pluto was not set at you, man—you would not be here if he was."

"Probably—if, however, you will call the beast to one side I would like to discuss my business with you, cavaliere."

"Shut the door and sit down there," he replied, "Pluto will not disturb us—you can put back your sword. It would avail you little," he grinned.

It cost me an effort, but I did as I was bidden, and Baglioni sank back into his lounge, the bear still standing and keeping its fierce eyes on me. Its master, however, kept running his hand up and down its shaggy coat, whilst he asked, in his measured voice:

"Well, and to what do I owe the honor of this visit?"

"You would prefer no beating about the bush?"

"It is my way."

"Well, then, cavaliere, I have come from Rome with a special object, and that is to ask you to change sides and to use your influence with your cousin, Count Carlo, to do likewise."

"I follow the head of my house."

"Exactly. You are aware that his Holiness is now over 70 years of age."

"The length of God, Alexander—yes."

"Well, he cannot go on forever, and if he were to die it is an end to the Borgia."

"Ho! ho!" he laughed, "it is an end to the Borgia—Cavaliere, your employees are mad. It will take not a little to break Cesare—Cesare Borgia, Duke of Romagna, Marquis of Faenza, Marquis of Rimini, Count of Forlì, Lord of Pesaro and Fano, Gonfaloniere of the Church—good for a low-born bastard—eh? Ho! ho! break Cesare! Not you."

"Stronger trees have fallen, signore—remember, we have France and the Florentines on our side, and 20,000 men, under Tremouille and Trevulzio, are not 20 miles from you."

"I was playing a risky game. If I did succeed in inducing this man to listen to my proposals, and he actually persuaded his cousin to do likewise, it would be a terrible blow to the Borgia. On the other hand, I ran the immediate risk of being arrested and kept a prisoner or killed outright. But it was the only way to gain time and look about me; and whilst Baglioni reflectively stroked his strange pet, making no reply to my last speech, I glanced cautiously but carefully around the room. Like the passage outside, the walls were hung with old armor and old flags. Time had defaced the pictures on the ceiling, and such furniture as there was was old, and the coverings of the chairs and tables moth-eaten and wine-stained. The stale odor of wine mingled with the must of a long untouched room, and everywhere, on the tables, on the chairs, and strewn here and there on the floor, were cards. Evidently the cavaliere had a weakness in this direction, and like lightning it flashed upon me that if he were a gambler the game was probably in my hands, and I would drop policy and turn to the cards.

My thoughts were interrupted by Baglioni, who broke the silence. "What evidence have you to show you are the person you represent yourself to be?"

"I can offer you none. In matters like these one does not carry evidence about—but if you like to send a trusted messenger to Rome, to the Cardinal d'Amboise—see the reception he will get—or, nearer still, to Tremouille!"

"And why come to me?"

"Because of your influence with your cousin, and because you are a man who will play for a big stake," and I risked the shot. His eyes flashed and his hand stopped in its movement through the fur of the bear.

"My influence with my cousin is—that," he snapped his fingers, "but a big stake—yes—I like playing for big stakes."

I stooped and picked up a card, holding it idly up between my finger and thumb.

"This, what I propose, is a bigger stake than you could ever get on the king, cavaliere," and with a twist of my wrist I sent the card from me; it hit the wall opposite with a smart tap, and then floated slowly and noiselessly down to the floor of the room.

The man's eyes followed the card, and he muttered as if to himself:

"A big stake—yes—Carlo gives me nothing—I am his jailer—I, who in a single night have lost two lordships to Riario, have now not a ducat to fling in the air, except what the niggard allows me."

I did not like the part I was playing, but I knew enough of the state of affairs to be certain that D'Amboise would richly reward the person who could detach Baglioni from the Borgia. I said no more than the truth, therefore, when I added, quietly:

"Cospetto!" he said, "it is useless."

"Then I am sorry," I replied, rising as if to depart, "but must wish you good day."

"Diavolo! Cavaliere, you are not going without some refreshment. Ho! without there," and his deep voice pealed out like a great bell.

The bear, which had stretched itself on the floor, rose with a grunt, but Baglioni pressed its head down, and it sank back and began to hum itself between its paws, like an enormous bee, or rather with the sound a thousand bees might make.

After a little delay there was a knock at the door, but, apparently, as usual, the person outside, whoever he was, did not feel disposed to come in. My host rose in anger and stepped across the room, followed by his beast, the latter passing unpleasantly close to me.

There was an altercation at the door; my host went up with his pet, and for a minute or two I was left alone. I moved my seat nearer to the small table beside Baglioni's lounge, and, taking up the pack of cards, began to shuffle and cut them.

The cavaliere came back very soon, a flask in one hand and a glass in the other.

"Blood of St. John!" he exclaimed, as he set them down with a clink on the table, "those rascals—I will have their ears cut off—their ears cut off!" and he fondled the great bear, which rose on its hind feet and began muzzling its master.

"I am not surprised, Corpo di Bacco! The king again!" and I flung down the pack in apparent disgust.

"Down, Pluto!" and Baglioni turned to me: "The king again. What was that you said?"

"Cutting left hand against the right. I lost three times."

"I lost ten thousand one night over cutting—but help yourself," and he pushed the flask towards me, and then filled his own, which he drank at a gulp.

"Come, cavaliere—you are in no hurry—cut me through the pack."

"With pleasure, but my purse-bearer is downstairs—will you permit me to see him?"

"By all means—the heavier the purse the better for me."

"A favor—I cannot play with that beast near me—could you not send him away?"

"Send him away—my familiar," he said, with an awful smile. "No, no, Di Savelli—he is my luck; but I shall keep him at a distance if you like."

I rose and went down to Jacopo, and found him and Bando Nere already on friendly terms with the guard. I took my purse from him and found time to whisper a warning to strike the moment he heard my whistle. When I came back I was relieved to find the bear fastened by a chain to a ring in the wall. The chain itself was weak and could have been snapped with ease, but the animal made no effort to strain at it, and lay down as contentedly as a dog. Baglioni had pulled a table into the center of the room and was seated at it, impatiently ruffling the cards.

"Back at last," he said, and his voice had lost its measured cadence; "heavens, I have not spread the cards for a whole year—what stakes?"

"Sharply cutting the cards?"

"Yes, it is the quickest game I know."

"Say a crown each turn to begin with."

We cut through four times, and I paid over two crowns. Baglioni laughed as he put them on one side; "padding stakes these, cavaliere—make them ten crowns a cut."

"Agreed—three cuts and a shuffle."

He nodded, and I paid ten crowns, feeling at this rate that my purse would soon be empty; but I saw that the fever was taking hold of him, and offered to double the stakes.

My sword was up to the hilt in its side.

and won. From that moment luck favored me, and at the end of half an hour's play the cavaliere had lost all his ready money, about 60 crowns, and owed me 500 besides. He did not take his losses well; all the restrained self-command which he first exhibited gave place to a wild excitement, and his hands shook as he shuffled the cards, his white face paling whiter than ever.

"Curse the cards!" he said, "I have no luck."

The moment had come for which I had been watching. Time after time I felt inclined to strike a sudden blow, but held myself in.

"No more to-day, cavaliere," I said, filling my glass; "I have business and must away."

A red flush came to his forehead; "I cannot pay you at once," he said, in a low tone.

"Tush!" I replied, "the word of Baglioni is enough—but if you want a last try for your revenge I will let you—"

"Double or quit?" he hurried in.

"No, cavaliere," and I dropped the words out slowly, "the five hundred against a five minutes' interview with the Lady Angiola."

He leaned back in his chair in amazement, and I went on: "Listen to me, I only want five minutes' speech with her—in your presence if you will—come, shall I cut or will you?"

"Diavolo!" he muttered, "if Carlo hears of this—well, yes—I will cut first—the ten—a bad cut to beat."

I cut carelessly and faced my card. It was a king.

"Hell and furies!" he burst out. "You have won. Come, sir, and, rising, he advanced towards the door.

"A moment, cavaliere," I said in your presence. I did not include Messer Pluto there in the interview."

He gave me an unpleasant look, but stopped short.

"Very well," he said, and, taking a large key from his girdle, went on before me.

It cost me a great effort to keep cool; up to now my luck had been so great that every moment there was a temptation to put all to the hazard of one stroke. I smiled under my beard as I thought of the imposing fool Count Carlo had placed in charge of his prize, and when I saw the huge shaking hand clutching the key I could not help thinking that nerves like that would never hold a sword straight, and that for all his size and courage the cavaliere was not a very formidable foe.

In a few steps we reached the door he wanted, and Baglioni, after knocking once, simply turned the key and pushed open the door.

Looking over his shoulder I saw a small but well-furnished room, and standing in the middle of it, in startled surprise at this sudden intrusion, the figure of Angiola. Quick as thought I made a warning gesture, and almost at the moment Baglioni turned round with:

"A visitor for you, madam."

She did not seem to recognize me, but at the warning gesture I made a faint flush came into her cheek. She stood looking at us half frightened, half indignant, and at last spoke.

"I do not recognize—"

"Ugo di Savelli, madam," and I bowed.

Her lips curled a little as she answered: "Well, Messer Ugo di Savelli—Cavaliere Ugo di Savelli, I should say—is it not so? May I ask your business? If it is any message from your master I incline to hear it, and she turned away with a motion of supreme disdain, thinking no doubt that I was a follower of Count Carlo.

"Ho! ho!" laughed Baglioni at my look of discomfiture, "the future countess can speak her mind. I pity Carlo. You had best cut short your five minutes, cavaliere, and come back to the cards."

At this moment I heard the bear whining below, impatient for his master, and I knew his bonds were all too slender to hold him. There was nothing for it but to save Angiola in spite of herself. All this happened in a flash, and with my full strength I hit Baglioni below the left ear, just where the neck and head united. So sudden, so unexpected was the blow that the huge man rolled over like an ox, and a short shrill scream broke from Angiola. My sword was out in a moment, and I stood over Baglioni.

"A cry, a movement, and I kill you like a dog," I gasped, my breath coming thick and fast; "throw the key to the lady—pick it up, girl—quick—now run to the door and stand there—I am here to save you." It was done at once, for Baglioni saw he must obey or die, and springing back I closed the door quickly and turned the key. Almost as I did so I heard footsteps hurrying below, and blew loudly on my whistle. The sound of the whistle was followed by an angry shouting that was drowned by a terrible roar, and I saw Pluto before me, rushing up the stair, with the end of his broken chain still hanging to him. Baglioni was battering at the door behind me. He was safe enough, but my companion had dropped in a faint, and I wanted all my hands and all my nerve to meet the beast, who was now on the stairway, not ten feet away from me. Close to me was a heavy stool. I seized this and flung it at the animal with all my strength, and getting between his forefeet I caused him to stumble and slip back a half dozen steps, but with another roar Pluto gathered himself together and rushed up again, his jaws agape and white with foam. I gave him the point deep into his neck. It might have been a pin prick, and he felt the steel with his teeth. Rising to his feet he struck at me, tearing my short cloak clean off my shoulders, and then my sword was up to the hilt in his side and we grappled. My left cheek was once touched by his claws, and seemed to be hanging in ribbons; but although almost blinded with blood and choked by his fetid breath I held my head well down and drove my dagger again and again into the beast. Angiola had recovered from her faint, and above the grunting of the bear, the battering at the door and the clash of steel below I heard her laughing in shrill hysterics. My strength was failing. I was about to give up all but lost when there was a loud report, and with a howl the bear fell backward. My hand somehow fastened itself to the hilt of my sword sticking in the animal's side, and the weight of him, as he fell back, and as I shook myself clear, freed the blade. I stood half-dazed, watching the huge black body sliding limply down the stairs, until it lay in a shapeless heap on the landing. Jacopo's voice brought me to myself.

"For the love of God—quick, excellency—quick!"

God, I suppose, gives men strength sometimes for His own purposes. And so it must have been with me, for I picked my dear up in my arms and half giddy and staggering made my way to the entrance door. I need not say I had no time to look about me, but Jacopo helped me with his burden. Lifting her to the pommel of the saddle, I sprang up behind, and, drawing my darling close to me, with a shout of triumph I set free my plunging horse and let him go with a loose rein.

Sterne's Destination.

Lawrence Sterne, the writer, was the victim of the intensest poverty. A little time before his death, being in a state of destitution, he went one evening to borrow five pounds from his friend Garriek. Upon arriving he heard music and knew that a party was going on. He heard the merry laughter, and gently replacing the uplifted knocker re-traced his steps. We never feel our miseries so keenly as when contrasted with the joys of others, and it is only then that we realize Wordsworth's picture: "And homeless near a thousand homes I stood. And near a thousand tables pined for food."

A Novelist's Memory.

A characteristic of the late William Black was his ignorance of his own books, and it was very difficult to get him to talk about his novels. It seemed that as soon as the proof sheets were returned to the printer Mr. Black forgot all about his own creations. "In talking to my husband the other day," Mrs. Black once said to a visitor, "I suddenly remembered an anecdote in one of his novels which illustrated what I was saying. Mr. Black laughed heartily at the story and then turned eagerly to me: 'But where did you hear so good a story?' My husband wouldn't believe it was in one of his own books until I found it for him."—Detroit Free Press.

Getting an Opening.

A man had a story about a gun which he delivered himself of upon all occasions.

At a dinner party one evening he writhed in his chair for over an hour waiting for a chance to introduce his story, but no opportunity presented itself. Finally he slipped a coin into the hand of a waiter and whispered: "When you leave the room again slam the door." The waiter slammed the door as directed, and the man sprang to his feet with the exclamation: "What's that noise—a gun?" "Oh, no!" replied his host. "It was only the door." "Ah, I see! Well, speaking of guns reminds me of a little story," etc.—Liverpool Mercury.

EXTENSION LADDER.

Description and Pictures of One That Is Easily Made and Operated Without Difficulty.

Upon almost every farm a tall ladder would be very convenient, especially in painting tall buildings, picking apples, etc., but when a ladder is over 20 feet long it is very hard to handle, especially if one man has to do it alone. For high work I find that an extension ladder is very handy, and I will try to describe one that is easily made and operated. Make two ladders of any length you desire, but I prefer 15 feet. Make the bottom one wide enough to admit the top one inside of the frame. On the rounds at the top of the bottom section bolt two flat pieces of iron on the outside and bend them over so that when the top section is laid on the rounds they will hold it in place. On the lower ends of the top section bolt two iron rods and let them come down straight, and at the end bend a half circle, so they will just fit over the rounds; this will support the bottom of the top section and the iron rods at the top will hold it in place. The ladder can be doubled up and placed where you want it. Push the top section up when you desire to climb higher and stop whenever you want it by simply setting the iron rods upon a round. If it is not wanted for an extension ladder it can be slipped apart and used as two single ladders. The illustrations will show its construction. Fig. 2 in the cut shows the iron that holds the ladder together. It is four inches wide at the top, the side that has the bolts is three inches and the short side one inch long. At 3 is shown the iron that is fastened to lower end of top section.—M. C. Thomas, in Ohio Farmer.

Raising Peaches from Seed.

The prevalence of yellows among peaches makes their propagation by budding a danger in spreading the disease. It is in the sap, and if any tree which the knife cuts into to make a place for the bud is affected with yellows, the taint will be retained by the knife and spread the yellows to all the trees inoculated. It is quite easy to be sure that a rich, luscious peach is not affected with yellows, especially if gathered from the tree. The pit from such a peach ought to produce a valuable seedling and free from disease. The low reputation of seedling peaches dates from the time when the natural fruit was about the only kind grown. But even then some valuable seedlings were found in every seedling produced.—American Cultivator.

The Feed and the Cows.

There is considerable in a cow's possibility to give a good quality of rich milk, but it is easy to have that possibility ruined by poor feed and care in bringing up and developing. On the other hand, no amount of food and care will induce a cow that gives thin, poor milk to turn about and give milk which is rich in solids. Good feed and good care will help develop many cows that have been neglected, but if there is any decided improvement it will be made with cows that are born to be good, but have not had the opportunity. To get the most out of any cow, good or bad, good feed and care are necessary, but it is the good cow that gives the best returns when well fed and cared for.—Daily World.

The Importance of Drainage.

Wet land should be drained, as it may be the most fertile on the farm. By the use of drain tile there will be no unsightly open ditches, and the field can be cultivated as easily as any other. If the land is not very wet the cost of drainage will be but little, and such land will be just as valuable for pasture as before, with the added advantage of being adapted to a greater variety of grasses than formerly. It can then also come under the regular crop rotation. If a plot has been too wet to use for ordinary crops it will also be too wet for grass some years, and when drained it will produce green food earlier in spring and later in the fall.

Teach the Lambs to Feed.

The little lamb should be taught to eat as soon as possible, by keeping feed in a trough in a pen near by, so arranged that the lambs can go in and out at will. This should be kept up until the ewe can go through the same hole that the lamb does, even feeding the lambs after the sheep go on grass. If ever a sheep is to have short rations, don't let it be during the first three months of its life. The same might be said of any other kind of stock. Dock the lambs and castrate the ram lambs when about two weeks old.—Farmers' Review.

OPINIONS DIFFER.

Authorities Cannot Agree on the Best Age at Which to Plant Apple Trees.

The question as to whether it is better to plant one-year-old or two-year-old apple trees has been at times quite thoroughly discussed by some of the most prominent horticulturists of the northwest. The question has been recently taken up by the Western Fruit Grower of St. Joseph, Mo. It has obtained and published the opinions of many prominent fruit growers, nurserymen and others on the subject, but there is nothing like an agreement of opinion on the question. Maj. Frank Holsinger, of Rosedale, Kan., would, other things being equal, plant apple trees three or four years old. N. F. Murray, of Oregon, Mo., says two-year-old apple trees do better than small one-year-olds, but well-grown one-year-olds have many advantages and will give satisfaction in planting new orchards. Prof. John Craig, of the Iowa agricultural college, is not very definite in his statement and evidently believes that it depends upon other conditions whether it is better to use one-year-old or two-year-old trees. Peter Youngers, Jr., of Geneva, Neb., prefers trees two years old. J. C. Evans, of North Kansas City, Mo., would make no difference, as the advantages just about offset each other. F. Wellhouse, of Topeka, Kan., prefers two-year-old trees. Prof. Whitten, of the Missouri agricultural college, ordinarily prefers to plant trees two years old, but knows a good many successful horticulturists who prefer first-class yearlings. Silas Wilson, of Atlantic, Ia., says that yearling trees are all right if the land on which they are planted is in some kind of a hoed crop, but if the ground is to be sowed with oats or wheat or planted with corn two-year-old trees should be used. Prof. Budd recommends yearling trees, and so does T. T. Lyon. H. E. Van Deman likes a one-year-old tree. W. L. Hall, of Anthony, Kan., would plant yearling trees if he could secure those which had made vigorous growth. R. J. Bagby prefers trees one year old, but says the finest are those which are cut back at the end of the first year and then allowed to grow another year in the nursery, giving a one-year top on a two-year root. Stark Bros. prefer strongly-rooted, well-grown, one-year budded trees. Mr. Butterfield's choice is a medium-sized two-year-old tree.

The foregoing opinions all relate to apple trees. In the case of plum, peach and pear trees when any preference was expressed it was for trees one year old.

FOR COOLING MILK.

A Device Which, Although Extremely Simple and Inexpensive, Does Its Work Well.

Make a box of tin, zinc, galvanized iron or wood; wood answers the purpose, and can be made quickest and cheapest. Have a V-shaped bottom of galvanized iron or tin, arranged in the box as shown in Fig. 1. This bottom is crimped about half as high as the sides of the box. When running water is not available, make the box like Fig. 2, to have a compartment at one end into which water is poured. The water runs under the spaces W, W, Fig. 1, in which M is the milk. If running water can be used, the boxes can be made without the compartment at the end to receive the water, the water being conducted under the milk receptacle by a pipe connection. The water is taken from cooler by an overflow pipe or a faucet. Put the milk into the cooler as fast as taken from the cows. When you are done milking, the milk is cool enough to put into the cans. A strainer is at one end under the milk faucet. Three feet long and 12 or 14 inches square is a convenient size to make the device.—J. G. Allhouse, in Ohio Farmer.

Beekeeping for Farmers.

We believe that bees ought to be on every farm, if there is anything at all in the neighborhood for them to feed upon. For the outlay there can be nothing on the farm that will pay better or give more satisfaction. Honey is a delicious and healthful article of diet. It is the most delicate sweet that we have, and, as a correspondent of the Epitomist recently said, a family will consume an astonishing quantity of it. For home consumption alone the subject of beekeeping ought to be of interest to every farmer. As a product for market there is much more profit in honey than there is in butter on the average farm. Honey will sell for cash at all times. Butter does not as a usual thing.—Agricultural Epitomist.

Good feeding must attend rapid growth in trees and plants as well as in animals. Make the soil in the orchard rich.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FREE.

One of the Greatest Offers Ever Made.

The first five persons procuring the Endless Chain Starch Book from their grocer will each obtain one large 10c package of "RED CROSS" starch, one large 10c package of "HUBINGER'S BEST" starch, two Shakespeare pictures, printed in twelve beautiful colors, as natural as life, or one Twentieth Century Girl Calendar, the finest of its kind ever printed, absolutely free. All others procuring the Endless Chain Starch Book will obtain from their grocer two large 10c packages of starch for 5c, and the beautiful premiums, which are being given away. This offer is only made for a short time to further introduce the famous "RED CROSS" starch, and the celebrated "HUBINGER'S BEST" cold-water starch. "RED CROSS" laundry starch is something entirely new, and is without doubt the greatest invention of the Twentieth Century. It has no equal, and surpasses all others. It has won for itself praise from all parts of the United States. It has superseded everything heretofore used, or known to science in the laundry art. It is made from wheat, rice and corn, and is chemically prepared upon scientific principles, by J. C. Hubinger, an expert in the laundry profession, who has had 25 years of practical experience in fancy laundering, and who is the first successful and original inventor of all fine grades of starch in the United States. If you would have the best, ask for "RED CROSS" and "HUBINGER'S BEST," which are the finest starches on the market to-day. The jobbing houses all handle it, the retail grocer has it on his shelves, you find it in all the homes, while the careful housewife has adorned the walls of the home with the beautiful Shakespeare pictures, which are being given away in introducing "RED CROSS" and "HUBINGER'S BEST" starch.

THE PUBLIC.

Something for Sharks in All Lines of Business to Prey Upon.

"You must remember," said the man who was arguing with great volubility and self-approval, "that we owe a duty to the public." "Who is the public?" inquired Mr. Blykins, abruptly. "Why—er—the masses, you know; the general populace." "No," said Mr. Blykins, with emphasis, "you got the wrong idea. The public is something to be roped in; to be goaded; to be walked over. To the sugar trust the public is a great congregation of confectionery consumers. To the beef trust the public is a vast menagerie of carnivorous bipeds. To the politician it is a collection of persons who have influence at elections; to the theatrical manager, a crowd of people in front of the box office eager to get rid of money; to the street car conductor, a lot of creatures who ought to be made to step lively." "You think the public gets imposed upon all around?"

"Yes. It doesn't deserve any better, and retribution is always waiting. The man who imposes on the public in one respect lapses back into the general outfit in some other place and is imposed on in his turn. It is a heartless business all the way through. One great and elaborate scheme of imposition. What people ought to do is to hold primaries in all parts of the civilized world and send delegates to the Hague to see if they can't discuss something like a disarmament scheme by which the people of this earth can be persuaded to quit imposing on one another.—Washington Star.

The Place for It.

"Well, gentlemen," remarked the president of the club, "motions are in order. It has been suggested that we have a banquet. What shall be done?" "Mr. President," spoke up the man who was seldom heard from, "I move we dispose of it by laying it on the table." The motion was carried.—Philadelphia North American.

Nothing in a Pet Name.

Honest Methods Win.

This is a fact that sometimes is overlooked in these days of hurry and scramble, but it is a fact none the less. The success of the John M. Smyth Co., Chicago, whose advertisements are appearing in this paper, is a marked illustration in point. A tremendous business has been built up by this firm strictly on its merits. Good goods properly described and offered at a very low price, the unlimited capital of the firm enabling it to buy on extremely advantageous terms. See the striking advertisement elsewhere in this issue and write the John M. Smyth Co., 150 to 166 West Madison St., Chicago, for its mammoth catalogue. Every family should have it.

Motto of the Siamete Nation.

Have you heard the motto of the government of Siam? And having heard it, have you repeated it? And having repeated it, have you caught its purely personal application? And having caught it, have you tried it on your friends? This is the motto: "Ah Wa Ta Nos Siam." It sounds entirely intelligible nonsense, but keep saying it over as long as you can and as fast as you can and you will discover at last that the eastern patois has a western sense that aptly classifies many a remorseful subject of Uncle Sam. For "Ah Wa Ta Nos Siam" is easily evolved into "Ah, what an ass I am."—Chicago Chronicle.

EVERY woman suffering from any female trouble can be helped by Mrs. Pinkham. This statement is based on sound reasoning and an unrivaled record. Multitudes of America's women to-day bless Mrs. Pinkham for competent and common-sense advice. Write to her if you are ill. Her address is Lynn, Mass. Absolutely no charge is made for advice. "I suffered seven years and would surely have died but for your help," writes Mrs. Geo. BAINBRIDGE, Morea, Pa., to Mrs. Pinkham. "It is with pleasure I now write to inform you that I am now a healthy woman, thanks to your kind advice and wonderful medicine. I can never praise it enough. I was a constant sufferer from womb trouble, and leucorrhoea, had a continual pain in abdomen. Sometimes I could not walk across the floor for three or four weeks at a time. Since using your medicine, I now have no more bearing-down pains, or tired feelings, and am well and hearty. I shall recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all my suffering friends as the greatest remedy for all female weakness."

HOW CAN THEY BE SOLD AT THE PRICE?

Here is an organ possessing all the latest up-to-date improvements. The case is made of solid oak, is sawed and elegantly finished; it is 71 inches high, 42 inches wide and 23 inches deep. The beautiful canopy top is hand-carved and is fitted with a French beveled plate mirror. The action contains the very latest improvements and is also fitted with the automatic valve which prevents any possible overstraining of the bellows. The tone is everything that can be desired, being rich, full and sweet and equal to that in many higher priced organs. Has 110 octaves, a grand total of 122 reeds, three sets of octaves and two sets of two octaves each. Has 11 stops—diapason, celeste, principal melody, celeste, tremolo, bass coupler, treble coupler, diapason forte, vox humana, grand organ and swell. We guarantee absolute and perfect satisfaction or money refunded. We also allow the privilege of returning it at any time within 90 days of receipt if you are not perfectly satisfied. We also include with each organ an electric stool and a valuable book. All orders are promptly and carefully filled. This is certainly a bargain at our wonderfully low price. We will send to any address upon receipt of $5.00 as a guarantee of good faith, but we advise cash with order, whereby you save extra charges, while we guarantee to refund your money if you are not perfectly satisfied.
